Description

Four South Australian artists (two printmakers, a printmaker/sculptor and a photographer), respond to post bushfire landscapes of the Adelaide Hills through themes of trauma, regrowth, flora and fauna and time. This immersive project was initially inspired by the aftermath of the Scott Creek bushfire of 2021 and then expanded to include other sites within the Hills. A lot of the work was done in place, even in some instances returning multiple times to the same area to observe the regeneration of flora.

We live in a Time of Fires. As this is being written Victoria and Western Australia are experiencing extreme conflagrations. This exhibition is a sign of what has occurred and will continue in an ongoing global climate catastrophe.
